‘Ragged Edge’ weaves mythology and action for a fast-paced urban fantasy novel

Sean Gryphon has fought monsters that would give most people nightmares. He’s tired of fighting and tired of protecting humans. But when an ancient manuscript is found that could unleash Hell on Earth, Sean is charged with protecting the woman who discovered it – or die. What should have been a simple job changes his life in ways he never imagined. Sometimes, dying is the best option.

Pittsburg, KS – January 6, 2017 – After centuries of searching, we are still fascinated by the idea of finding lost civilizations like Atlantis or Lemuria under the sea. Scientists and explorers continue to search for and find signs of underwater civilizations.

First time author Dustyn McCormick skillfully taps into this fascination to bring Atlanteans to life in his debut novel, Ragged Edge, published by Spellhawks Press.

In this urban fantasy novel, McCormick weaves together lore about the Codex Gigas, a.k.a. The Devil’s Bible; Atlantis; and Celtic deities to deliver a whirlwind read aimed at lovers of humor-laced fantasy. In it, we meet Sean Gryphon, Atlantean and reluctant protector of human kind, and Dr. Ilsy Hillerman, discoverer of the Codex’s missing pages, as they fight a necromancer who would use the pages to unlock the gates of Hell.

“Dustyn’s use of subtle sarcasm and humor is engaging,” said Allen Childers, Spellhawks Press publisher, “but a lot of what interested me was his strong characters and the uniqueness of the concept. It went against most fantasy tropes. He gives a lot of historical context and a fresh perspective.”

Ragged Edge is available as a paperback or an e-book at Amazon. To learn more about Ragged Edge, visit www.dustynmccormick.com or www.spellhawkspress.com.

About the Author

Dustyn McCormick lives in Topeka, Kansas, where he has lived most of his life. Always a voracious reader, his interest in writing started in fourth grade, when his teacher required journaling and story writing. He collects books on and studies military history, pirates, the paranormal, and any other subject that doesn't serve a useful function. He and his wife have four children, two dogs, and a cat.
